

The background of the poster is a dark, grainy photograph of a person's silhouette from behind, looking towards a brightly lit, colorful abstract light display in shades of blue, green, and pink. The overall mood is artistic and cinematic.

Need a little time out?

We have put together an extensive programme that is really worth seeing. Nevertheless, you need a little time out now and then. For example, with a short bike tour towards the Kaisergarten and the castle (after which the city was named). There, you can sit by the canal and watch the ships go by, or you can ride over the bridge sculpture "Slinky Springs to Fame" by Tobias Rehberger. Further along the canal you will discover, among other things, the Gasometer (a former gas tank that has been converted into Europe's tallest exhibition and event hall) and the dancing electricity pylon at the Ripshorst hayloft garden.

Our cinemas

Lichtburg means light castle, which is – in our opinion – one of the most beautiful names for a cinema. Built back in 1931, it's a real film palace and a great place to show our films. The Walzenlagerkino got its name from the fact that the rollers for the zinc sheets were stored there in the former zinc factory. Also a real piece of the city's history.

Some Vocabulary

It's always nice to learn a word or two during a stay in a foreign country. Here is a small list that can help you find your way around.

Good to know

In Germany, you can drink tap water. Bring your own bottle and fill it at your hotel or the festival site. This is not only the cheapest, but also the most sustainable option.

Festival Bar

Relaxed nights with selected live music acts

This is where the festival day ends, where guests and audiences mix. It's the place to relax, listen to live music and dance. Free entry.
